FIGHTING IN MACEDONIA

Two British Divisions Said to Have Been Annihilated

SACRIFICE OF IRISH

Allies Reported to have Lost Eight Thousand Men in Killed, Wounded and Missing

Athens, Dec. 14.—A violent artillery battle is being fought along the Serbo-Greek frontier.

Bulgarian shells are falling on Greek territory, but thus far has done no material damage to any Greek property. Dispatches filed from frontier points late yesterday said that no Bulgarian or Austro-German soldiers had crossed the Greek border. But before many hours, it is believed the pursuit of the retreating Anglo-French forces will be resumed and fighting will begin on Greek soil.

One correspondent stationed at Saloniki, telegraphed that the small Bulgarian force actually had advanced five miles into Greek territory. Military authorities have no confirmation.

Falling back from Glegveli and Doiran, the main body of expedition. ary force entrenched four miles inside the Greek frontier. Their retreat was covered by an English division and several French battalions who held up the Bulgarian advance throughout Sunday.

From their new positions the allies yesterday were directing a heavy fire at the enemy whose advance apparently was halted while military conference were going on.

British and French wounded have been arriving at Saloniki for twenty-four hours. They declared that despite the numerical superiority of the enemy they could have held their front around Strumnitza for at least another fornight, had it been necessary. They lost comparatively few men, and scarcely any supplies in evacuating Serbian territory, they assert.

Berlin, Dec. 14—The French and British have been entirely expelled from Macedonian territory, it is officially announced by German Army headquarters, the advancing army, under General Todoroff, occupying Dorian and Gievgeli. It is declared that two British divisions were nearly wiped out during the advance.

London, Dec. 14—So far as is known, the hard-fought attacks on the British in Macedonia thus far have been delivered entirely by Bulgarians without German assistance. A dispatch to the Times says the Bulgarians left more than 8,000 dead or wounded on the field after two assaults on the British line.

"On the second attack," the dispatch continues, "our combined fire of artillery, rifles and rapid-firers was opened on the advancing masses at a range of about 500 yards. The Bulgarians faced the murderous hail at a run for 500 yards, then broke into flight, which quickly became a helter-skeletr rout."

How two companies of the Royal Inniskillin Fusileers, another of the Irish regiments forming the British divisions sacrificed themselves to cover the retreat of their comrades is told by the wounded who have reached British headquarters in Macedonia. The British were outnumbered 10 to 1 by the Bulgarians, who were well supplied with guns and machine guns. Last Monday morning they were awakened by a heavy bombardment by the Bulgarians, who poured a hail of shot and shell on them. Splintering rocks intensified the effect of their fire.

The Bulgarian infantry then advanced to the attack in massed formation and were punished severely, but the scarcity of British guns did not permit them to take proper toll of the advancing Bulgars. The British emptied their rifles rapidly into the crush and tried to stem the tide with bayonets, but were overborne by sheer weight of numbers, and the position was lost, Similarly the second line was lost, and the British fell back on the third line of defenses.

Two companies of Inniskillins, however, held on to the ridge known as Kevis Crest and kept back the Bulgarians the whole morning, although they were supported only by a rifle fire. Hardly a man escaped, but their stand impressed and delayed the Bulgars, thus giving the British much needed time to complete defensive dispositions in the third line, where the Bulgars were finally held up for four days.

The Bulgarians, having suffered heavily, have since then attempted no strong offensive up to Sunday.

TROUBLE ON PEACE SHIP.

Minority Stand by President Wilson's Preparedness Program.

According to wireless dispatches, war has broken out aboard the Ford peace ship.

Several members of the peace mission are preparing to quit the party at Christiania and return to America, alleging that the extreme pacifists have adopted an insulting attitude toward everybody upholding President Wilson's preparedness program.

Ford himself is doing his best to prevent an open break, He issued a statement denying that he was responsible for the 'steam roller" tactics alleged to have been employed by the extreme pacifists.

As a matter of fact this accusation was not made against Ford, but chiefly against the Rev. Charles F. Aked, of San Francisco, former Rockefeller's pastor, and Rev. Lloyd Jankin Jones, of Chicago, A complete split is imminent.

The row broke out Friday. Dr. Aked the Rev. Mr. Jones and Arthur L. Weatherby, of Lincoln, Nebr., introduced a resolution at a meeting of the peace voyagers opposing the President's preparedness plea. Ford and 21 other peace delegates signed the declaration. Nine other leaders refused.

Dr. Aked intimated very plainly that those who refused to attach their names to the resolution would be unloaded at the first port. The voyagers who refused to sign rushed to Ford to find out whether Dr. Aked had authority for his statement. Ford denied they would be unloaded, but continued to support the majority.

The minority carried Ford's message back to Dr. Aked. The conversation veered from acrimonious debate to violent altercations, in which the language became not only extremely personal, but occasionally profane.

Mrs. Helen King Robinson, of Denver, a member of the Colorado State senate, is one of those who refused to sign the resolution.

"My purpose in coming to Europe was to seek peace," she said. "I do not believe the best way to bring about peace is to adopt a resolution criticising the President's message."

Judge Ben. B. Lindsey, of Denver juvenile court fame, said he did not feel like signing the resolution, because it inflicted new issues upon the expedition. Lars P. Nelson, of New York, was another who refused. S. S. McClure, New York, publisher, was another who refused to sign. He said he opposed competition in arming, but not moderate preparedness.

FORD'S PEACE MESSAGE

Calls Upon European Nations to Declare Immediate Truce.

New York, Dec. 13.—Henry Ford today called upon rulers of warring European nations to declare an immediate truce and to begin negotiations for ending the world war.

Ford's message of peace went from the "peace ship," Oscar II, now approaching Christiania with its cargo of American peace advocates. The same message was sent to every ruler in Europe, including heads of neutral nations, and a copy was wirelessed back to New York, having been relayed from Ford's ship to the liner Noordam and then passed to Cape Race.

"We do earnestly entreat you, and the rulers of all other warring nations, to declare an immediate truce," Ford urged. "Let the armies stand where they are. Then let the negotiations proceed so that the soldiers may be delivered from another bitter winter in the trenches and sent back to their labors and their firesides.

"As there is no other way to end the war except by mediation and discussion, why waste one more precious human life for the sake of humanity?"

TILLMAN ON ROOSEVELT

Tells Senate Colonel is Giant in Mother Goose's Melodies

BRYAN IS OBSESSED

Chairman of Naval Committee Urges Necessity of Establishing Government Armor Plants.

Washington, Dec. 14. —Calling William J. Bryan "simply obsessed" and Theodore Roosevelt "the giant in Mother Goose," Chairman Tillman, of the Naval Committee, addressed the Senate yesterday on national defense and assailed what he characterized as the greed of private manufacturers of war materials.

Senator Tillman upheld Secretary Daniels' administration of the Navy Department and characterized as "simply outrageous" critics of the department, numbering among them former Secretary Meyer.

"The question of preparedness requires grave consideration and prompt action," said Senator Tillman "There are all sorts of opinions and advice from all quarters—good, bad and not only unwise but unthinkable of adoption except by wild men from Borneo.

"Mr. Bryan, the evangel of 'peace at any price,' is bitterly opposed to any and all increase. He seems to be simply obsessed on this subject and has lost his usual poise. Ex-President Roosevelt, on the other hand, who snorts and roars, like a veritable bull of Bashan, poses as the god of war and clamors for a very large standing army and great reserves. He reminds one of the giant in 'Mother Goose,'—

"'Fe, fi, fo, fum,
I smell the blood of a German man;
Be he alive, or be he dead.
I'll grind his bones to make my bread.'"

The senator said he realized the necessity for a greater army, but that the navy, "our first line of defense," should come first.

"The country ought to regard as a public enemy any Senator or member of Congress who tries to delay or thwart this purpose," Senator Tillman declared. "We have an armor trust now," said he, "just as we have had all along and it is doing business at the same old stands—Bethlehem, Carnegie and Midvale.

"The critics of the Navy Department, under Secretary Daniels, have been unusually active and outrageous in their work, not hesitating to even make false statements," said the Senator. "The one man particularly active in this criticism has been his immediate predecessor, Mr. Meyer seems to be unconscious of the fact that in indicting the navy as he has under Secretary Daniels he, in truth, is indicting himself and his Republican predecessors in the Navy Department. Congress has appropriated enough money, but it has been squandered, misappropriated or spent unwisely. Poor old Massachusetts, how unfortunate in giving birth to such a man as he! I feel sorry that she should be held up to scorn—by the actions of Mr. Von L. Meyer."

Concluding, Senator Tillman made a plea for prompt action on his Armor plant Bill.

"Nothing but brazen effrontery and unbridled greed, aided by official corruption in Washington," he said, "can delay the passage of this bill, and I hope that it will become law inside of 30 days," After his address, Senator Tillman called a meeting of the Naval Committee for today and will endeavor to have his bill reported at once to the Senate.

HIGH WINDS LAST NIGHT.

Old Boreas Opens Blasts Upon This Section After Yesterday's Snow.

According to the almanac, winter is scheduled to set in on the 21st instant, but those compelled to be out last night, were convinced that it had arrived ahead of time. The wind had changed from northeast to northwest early yesterday afternoon, and by dark it had attained force. It came in heavy gusts throughout the night, but diminished somewhat in force today. The temperature has dropped considerably since yesterday.

No damage, so far as can be learned, has resulted hereabouts, although considerable trouble has been caused elsewhere during the past twenty-four hours. Alexandria was not the centre of the storm. It raged on the coast and northeast of this city, in some places savoring of a blizzard. In New York, the wind attained a velocity of 64 miles an hour. The exceptionally high winds of the night of March 1st, 1914, which continued about forty-eight hours, blew at the rate of 61 miles an hour.

The storm, which brought to the North Atlantic seaboard and the Great Lake region the first heavy snowfall of the season, was central last night off Sandy Hook, N. J., and was moving northwestward.

The Weather Bureau's forecasters predicted more snow today in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New England and because of high winds accompanying the disturbance ordered warnings to shipping displayed at coast points from Sandy Hook north.

The steamer Southland was three-quarters of an hour late when she reached this port this morning.

MYSTERIOUS CASE

Washington Physician Held in Connection With Death of Young Woman

Miss Estelle Crawford, 25, a roomer at 706 L street northwest, Washington, died in Casualty Hospital yesterday. The police are holding Dr. Walter C. Murphy, 122 F. Street northwest, who was arrested at Union Station with a ticket for Burraw, a North Carolina point.

Dr. Murphy told the police, it is said, that the young woman had come to his office Sunday afternoon, had been there twelve hours, and when her condition was critical early yesterday he had called the police. The police would have nothing to do with the case, and Dr. Murphy called Casualty Hospital. Dr. Murphy declares the woman's death was due to natural causes. He declared she had been kept in his office for twelve hours after her admittance there because she was too ill to be removed.

HELD AS SWINDLER

Several Woman Charge Man With Stealing Jewelry From Them

New York, Dec. 14—A mean way of making a dishonest living was disclosed by the transfer from Ampers, N. J. to police headquarters of a young man called himself Thomas Murphy, to await trial for grand larceny in the second degree in connection with the alleged theft of a $350 pair of diamond earrings from Mrs. Rose Levy, Brooklyn. Several other women who lost jewelry or money picked out Murphy's picture in the rogues' gallery as that o fthe young man they suspected of victimizing them.

On December 7 a man identified in the pictures as Murphy went to the home of Mrs. Levy and told her, the police say, that her husband, Louis Levy, had been arrested, which wasn't true. He led Mrs. Levy to believe that he and other friends had raised $1,200 of the 1,500 bail demanded and that unless she could furnish the balance of $300 Levy would have to stay in jail. Mrs. Levy didn't have the money but she had some jewelry, she said, and the caller took her down to the criminal courts building. He ran up the steps with the earrings, the police say, and Mrs. Levy went after him but the man got away.

Detective Cook and Campbell subsequently found the earrings in Newark, where they had been pawned for $160.

ENGLAND TO BUY U. S. SECURITIES

House of Commons Passes to Second Reading Bill For Purchase

M'KENNA'S STATEMENT

Alleges Scheme is Entirely Voluntary and With No Intention of Harrassing Market.

London, Dec. 14. — After an explanation by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Reginald McKenna, and a short debate, the House of Commons passed yesterday evening a second reading of the bill empowering the government to mobilize American and Canadian securities, by purchase or by borrowing them, to be used primarily as collateral for loans, or, in case of necessity, to be sold to meet Great Britain's liabilities in the United States.

The scheme is an entirely voluntary one, and the chancellor made it clear that the government had no intention of swamping the American market, with securities which would be unfair to holders here, as they were to be paid for at the market price.

Mr. McKenna explained that the usual trade balance in favor of Great Britain had been exhausted by the huge demands made upon America for goods for England and her allies, and the amounts paid in interest on foreign securities held here, or earned by British holders were not sufficient to set this right. Consequently, in order to meet liabilities in the United States, they were obliged to go outside the ordinary course of trade, and had to borrow or sell securities.

He estimated that the securities held here were valued anywhere from $1,500,000,000 to $4,000,000,000 and expressed the hope this would be sufficient "to meet our liabilities, and to maintain exchange in the United States for the period of the war."

The bill met with general approval, although David Marshall Mason, doubted whether the scheme would affect exchange, while Frederick H. Booth hoped the government would assist traders who had to meet liabilities in America, and that 'these transactions will not lead to New York replacing London as the financial center of the world."

Replying to the question of Sir George Younger as to whether the government intended to confine itself to borrowing in America upon the securities it would acquire, Edwin S. Montagu, Financial Secretary to the Treasury, speaking for Chancellor McKenna, said that the government certainly did not propose to confine itself to either borrowing or selling. Regard must be had to the position of affairs in America, and the government proposed to do in every case what seemed most advantageous for the object in view.

"The offer to give British credit in exchange for American securities at current market prices," said the chancellor, "can only be justified by the absolute necessity for mobilizing our American securities in order to make them of the utmost value to the nation as a whole.

"While American securities today have a good price, it is true that British securities—owing not to any failure of credit, but to our having such large demands to meet—are comparatively low."

Mr. McKenna said he desired to make it absolutely clear that there was no intention to swamp the American market with vast masses of securities. The government intended to hold the securities in order to deal in them, he added, and primarily they would be used as collateral securities.

New York, Dec. 14.—The decision of the British government to make outright purchases of American securities caused no surprise here, the plan having been reached as one of several which British Treasury officials were known to have under consideration.

CONDITIONS IN HOPEWELL.

A. J. Wedderburn Says That It Will Rise Greater Than Ever.

Alexander J. Wedderburn, of Fairfax, now connected with the Internal Revenue Office in Richmond, writes the Gazette that Hopewell will be rebuilt at once "greater than ever." In an interesting letter he says:

"Few people can know or even imagine what Hopewell was and no one wants to see what it is. Last March a corn planted field from the Appomattox to the N. & W. Railway on the line of the Du Pont works, with probable 20 shacks and two or three buildings either erected or in the course of erection; lots going begging at $150 each and like a wonderful bubble, inside of eight months, eight by six squares sprang into existence; land increased from $150 to $6,000 a lot; good frames took the place of shacks and brick structures were run up in place of good frames.

"In six hours this whole town, six by eight squires, went back to the place from which it started, eight months before —a corn plowed field. Between dawn and nightfall of December 9th. Hopewell from being the most active, thriving and busiest town in old Virginia lay a smouldering seething fiery ash heap."

"Just picture to yourselves—from Oronoco to Duke, from the river to Columbus street, absolutely denuded of buildings, except, strange to say, one two story frame building. There is nothing remaining but all kinds of rubbish that fire could not burn. Of course, the frame buildings invited the result but how the numerous brick structures crumbled beneath the direly blast is something which has not yet been explained.

"Yesterday 10,000 people were housed in peace and apparent plenty. The town while not too good was not a Sodom or Gomorah as we view it. Yesterday it woke to peace and plenty, before the sun had set it lay a heap of ashes with 10,000 homeless people. The horrors cannot be described, the facts are incredible. War may be hell but such a scene brings hell right home to us."

ZEPPELIN DESTROYED

Airship Struck as it is About to Drop Bomb on Station of Kalkun

Petrograd, Dec. 14—Russian artillery destroyed a Zeppelin airship the night of December 5.

The dirigible made its appearance from the direction of Novo Alexandrovsk, passing over the Russian positions going toward Dvinsk. It was located by a powerful searchlight and Russian artillery opened fire. The Zeppelin, however, rose to a higher altitude and became lost in the clouds.

Presently the airship reappeared over Kalkun. Its motors had been stopped, usually the indication that bombs are about to be dropped. At that time the machine was directly over the railway station and the artillery began shelling it. One of the shells made a hit and the aircraft became enveloped in flames. Watchers saw it disappear in a cloud of smoke and heard a loud explosion.

What was left of the machine fell inside the Russian lines. The charred bodies of the German crew were extricated from the debris and buried. A cross was erected over their grave with the inscription. "Honor to the brave, though they were enemies."

PLOUGHED INTO PASSENGERS

Thrown Into Snow Bank and Only a Few Injured.

Port Jervis, N. Y., Dec. 14.—An Erie express train ploughed into a group of twenty passengers at the Otisville station at 6 o'clock last night. Six persons were severely injured.

That no one was killed was due to the snow banks in which the men and women landed when they were hurled through the air.

Train No. 2 had a large snow plough attached to the engine, and it is believed the snow thrown by the plough blinded the engineer. The train was said to be running very fast on a straight section of track.

The passengers who were hurt were crossing the tracks to the station when train No. 2 dashed through the group.

Ruth Charlotte Monroe, the infant daughter of Thomas and Lucretia Monroe, died last night at the home of her parents, 1223 Duke street.

WILL BUILD A GREATER NATION

Plans of Southern Commercial Congress Outlined by Speakers

THE GREATER SOUTH

John Barrett Makes Plea For Closer Understanding Between All American Republics.

Charleston, S. C. Dec. 14.— The Southern Commercal Congress began its seventh annual convention here yesterday with addresses on the South's and the nation's commercial and industrial problems by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, Governor Henry C. Stuart, of Virginia; John Barrett, director-general of the Pan-American Union; Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia University; Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida, president of the Congress, and John Temple Graves, of New York. Plans of the congress to build a "greater nation through a greater South," were outlined by the speakers.

Dr. Butler, addressing the night session, declared that international problems of the United States now overshadow domestic policies, though the latter have not diminished in importance. He urged that the United States prepare to aid Europe at the end of the war in setting up its "overturned political fabric" upon democratic principles. Governor Stuart, who also addressed the congress tonight, discussed agricultural and commercial problems of the South.

Senator Fletcher, in his opening address, told what the congress already had accomplished in developing the South's resources. A suggestion by Dr. Charles W. Eliot, that the Southern Commercial Congress drop the word "Southern" from its title was presented by Senator Fletcher. To the suggestion the Senator replied that the congress sought to aid the nation through developing one of its sections, and declared the word "Southern" had no more limited the scope of the congress to the South than had the word "Commercial" in its title.

John Temple Graves, speaking on the "Victories of Peace," traced the South's development since 1865 and referred to peace "as the spirit which has wrought this modern miracle."

Secretary McAdoo told the congress that "an obvious duty confronts the nation." The first necessity, he said, was to provide for the nation's physical safety, and the second to secure its economic safety. He asserted that both could be secured by establishment of a merchant marine. Mr. McAdoo brought to the congress the personal greetings of President Wilson. The President also expressed his good wishes for the congress in a telegram.

Making a plea for closer understanding between all American republics, Mr. Barrett declared after the European war the United States would find itself "unbeloved by all the present belligerents."

"The victor will say, 'We won despite the United States,' while the losers will say 'We lost because of the United States,'" Barrett declared.

He added that the leading men and the leading newspapers of all twenty Latin-American republics, stood with the United States in its attitude towards the European belligerents and declared that the Pan-American doctrine will some day supersede the Monroe Doctrine, and the great South American republics will stand behind this country in its relations with foreign nations across the ocean as the United States, under its Monroe Doctrine, today would back up its southern neighbors.

The afternoon session was given over to the woman's auxiliary. In a plea for equal suffrage for women, Miss Kate Gordon, of New Orleans, declared that it pleased her that the men of the Southern Commercial Congress had recognized the need of co-operation of Southern women in their work. "This in itself would be an opening wedge for suffrage," she declared.

The representatives of the two lodges left Alexandria shortly after noon today in the private car "Mt. Vernon" of the Washington-Virginia Railway. Upon arrival at Mt. FACTORIES OF THE CITY

Census Bulletin Shows $4,573,000 Invested in Enterprises With $1,958,000 Material

A preliminary statement of the general results of the census of manufactories for Alexandria has been issued by Director Sam L. Rogers, of the bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. It consists of a summary comparing the figures for 1909 and 1914, by totals, prepared under the direction of William M. Steuart, chief statistician of manufactures.

The population of Alexandria at the last census was 15,329, and it is estimated that it was 15,670 on July 1, 1914.

The capital invested, as reported in 1914, was $4,573,000, and the average capital per establishment was approximately $33,000. Inquiry contained in the census schedule calls for the total amount of capital, both owned and borrowed, invested in the business, but excludes the value of rented property, plant, or equipment which was employed in the conduct of manufacturing enterprises. In the final bulletins and reports the rental paid for such property will be shown separately. The cost of materials used in 1914, $1,959,000. In addition to the component materials which enter into the products the establishment for the census year were included the cost of fuel, mill supplies, and rent of power and heat. The cost of materials, however, does not include unused materials and supplies bought either for speculation or for use during a subsequent period.

The value of products, which amounted to $3,660,000, represents their selling value price at the plant as actually turned out by the factories during the census year and does not necessarily have any relation to the amount of sales for that year. The values under this head also include amounts received for work done by materials furnished by others.

Cannot take you from our hearts.

OUR DIRECT IMPORTATION OF THE

Celebrated Gouda Wares

HAS JUST ARRIVED FROM HOLLAND.

Gouda Ware is doubtless one of the most effective wares that has recently come from abroad. In appearance it resembles very closely the well-known Cloisonne, which has so many admirers. It is dull finished in dark, rich Persian effects and rather subdued colorings that lend themselves so harmoniously to the furnishing of the dinning room, living rooms, den and smoking room. Decidedly unusual and effective shapes are further enhanced by the unique and fitting decorations given each piece.

TOUCH OF WINTER

Northwest Gale and Snow in New York.

New York, Dec. 14—Winter descended upon New York and vicinity yesterday with a northwest gale and a deluge of snow. One death, seven injuries, traffic delays, and great property damage resulted.

Andrew Campbell, a lineman, met his death at Nutly. The storm blew down a telephone wire and Campbell was shocked to death when he attempted to pick it up.

The snow wrought havoc with telegraph and telephone lines. Many towns just outside New York were completely cut off from train and wire communication. In New Yorq Harbor tugs have been sent to the assistance of the Standard Oil tanker Vesta, reported adrift off Staten Island.

Subway and trolley services were kept rnnning fairly on schedule until late in the afternoon. Then the melting snow gained entrance to the subway at Brooklyn Bridge and caused one of the worst tie-ups in history.

The fire alarm system in the Bronx was put out of commission.

Thousands of men have been put to work clearing the city streets.

Washington, Dec. 14—Telegraph communication with New York was interrupted last night because of the snowstorm, the first of the year. A few wires, inadequate for regular service, are to be had with New York Service is being forced over wires to Philadelphia, where messages are being relayed to New York and Northern points.

Philadelphia, Dec. 14—One man was killed, several were seriously injured and there were numerous minor accidents as a result of the snow storm which swept the eastern section of the State yesterday.

In the country districts where nearly a foot of snow fell, many telegraph and telephone wires were prostrated and wire communication between this city and New York was hampered.

The death due to the storm was that of a laborer employed by one of the railroad companies who was struck by a train while shoveling snow from the tracks.

Boston, Dec. 14—The first severe storm of the winter swept over New England yesterday and last night. Inland cities reported heavy falls of snow, which greatly handicapped steam and electric railroad traffic, but points along the coast were drenched under a fall of rain in a gale of from 50 to 60 miles an hour. Blizzard conditions were reported at some points. In many places telegraph poles were prostrated.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Dec. 13—A blizzard arrived here yesterday and last night the storm continued unabated, The fall of snow has already reached 15 inches and no trolley cars are running. Trains on the Central New England Railroad are completely tied up, and on the New York Central are considerably behind their schedule.

zNew York, Dec. 14.—Greater New York and the entire East coast awoke today storm-bound.

Trains were stalled in snowdrifts and wire communication interrupted Little relief was foreseen during the morning by the Weather Bureau, and it was predicted that the day would bring northwest gales, more snow and a decided drop in temperature.

Heavy casualities were feared, as a result of the storm. Twenty persons were injured, some seriously, at Otisville station, N. Y., when an Erie passenger engine plowed through a crowd, crossing the tracks to board the train. In New York city a number of persons were struck by automobiles and other vehicles while forging their way through an ankle-deep coat of slush that filled the streets. A heavy wet fall of snow continued last night. Charles E. Evans, seventy-five, was overcome and died of exposure at Springfield, Mass.

POWER OF GERMAN MONEY.

Bills of Exchange on Berlin Drop to Lowest Level in New York.

New York, Dec. 14.—The value or purchasing power of German money in this market as represented by marks fell to its lowest known level today when bills of exchange on Berlin dropped to 77 1-2, a decline of a point from the recent minimum. In substance, marks, normally quoted at 23 3-4 cents, were worth only 19 3-8 cents.

Incidentally, Austrian exchange or kronen fell to lowest rates, but in this instance the decline was sentimental rather than actual, no sales of exchange on Vienna being reported.

The extreme weakness of exchange on the Teutonic countries was ascribed to unconfirmed rumors that the Reichs-bank or Imperial Bank of Germany contemplates assuming command over all the gold now privately held within the empire.

VIRGINIA SENATORS

Martin and Swanson on Some of Senate's Most Important Committees

Washington, D. C. Dec. 14—Senate committees for the present session were announced yesterday, following repeated conferences among the leaders. Few changes took place in the chairmanships, but many changes in the committee personnel.

The Virginia Senators came out of the deal in excellent shape. Each of them retained his old chairmanship of a major or active committee, and Senator Swanson received more berths perhaps than any Democratic Senator in the body.

Senator Martin is chairman again of the Committee on Appropriations and a member of that on the District of Columbia, Commerce, Fisheries and Expenditures in the Departments of Commerce and the Navy.

Senator Swanson is chairman of Buildings and Grounds, Post-Offices and Post Roads, a member of that, on Education and Labor, Foreign Relations, Naval Affairs, Indian Depredations and Expenditures in the Department of Labor.

SUFFRAGE CONFERENCE.

Call Upon Democratic Party to Incorporate Plank in Platform.

Miss Kate Gordon, of Louisiana, president; Miss Laura Clay, of Kentucky, vice president at large; Mrs. O. F. Ellington, of Arkansas, recording secretary; Miss Louise Collins, of New Orleans, corresponding secretary; Mrs. H. B. Barrett, of New Orleans, treasurer. Auditors, W. M. Stoner, of Washington, and Mrs. Ellicott, of Maryland.

State vice presidents — Virginia, Mrs. W. W. Foster; Arkansas, Mrs. T. T. Cotnam; Washington, D. C., Mrs. G. A. Arms; Florida, Miss C. M. Robinson; Georgia, Mrs. Emily McRougald,; Kentucky, Mrs. A. M. Harrison; Louisiana, Mrs. John B. Parker; Maryland, Mrs. Ellicott; Mississippi, Miss Pauline Orr; Oklahoma, Mrs. J. C. Fuquay; South Carolina, Mrs. John Gary Evans; Tennessee, Miss Catherine Wester; Texas, Miss Elenor Brackenridge.

Resolutions calling upon Congress to give the right to women to vote for Congressmen and Senators were also passed.

When a severe cold settles on the lungs it is called bronchitis. There is danger of its leading to broncho pneumonia, and for this reason it is always best to go to bed and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed until well along toward recovery. Mrs. Charles E. Woodard, Sandy Creek, N. Y. writes: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured me of bronchitis last fall. When I began using it I was so hoarse at times that it was difficult for me to speak above a whisper. I resorted to the use of this valuable medicine and found it very soothing and healing. In a week's time I was well." Obtainable everywhere.

PLACE FLOWERS ON SARCOPHAGI.

According to a custom inaugurated sixteen years ago today, Alexandria and Fredericksburg Masons today placed wreaths upon the marble resting places of George and Martha Washington at Mount Vernon. The ceremonies are generally informal, and no matter how unpropitious the weather may be, this annual custom is observed. This morning, while snow covered the ground and bleak winds were roaring through the trees, members of the Masonic fraternity of Alexandria and Fredericksburg stood with bared heads at the tomb overlooking the Potomac and performed a pleasant duty.

On account of the blizzard, the New York Masons did not participate as they had intended.

Others not Masons were witnesses of the ceremonies.

On December 14, 1899, one hundred years after the Good Shepherd had closed the eyes of George Washington, Masons throughout the country and in England entered with enthusiasm in paying honor to the great Virginian. The Masons of Alexandria entered into the observation with an enthusiasm seldom witnessed. There was a banquet at Armory Hall at night which proved to be one of the most enjoyable ever given in the city.

The movement to celebrate the centennial of Washington's death among Masonic bodies orginated in 1893 with the Grand Lodge of Colorado. The interest had not been confined to the United States, but it had spread abroad, also. It was a source of much regret that the Prince of Wales, who is the Grand Master of Masons of England, was obliged at the last moment to revoke his acceptance of the invitation to be present and assist in the ceremonies on the centennial of Washington's death. Along with his letter of regret he sent Grand Master Duke, of Virginia, his photograph in full Masonic attire. The interest shown in the movement by the Prince, the Earl of Londesborough (who contributed a wreath for the occasion) and other subjects of Queen Victoria who was England's Sovereign at that time, was calculated to animate the souls of all Americans. One hundred years before the mother country was manifesting other feelings toward the shoot which had been taken from the great tree. That shoot, however, had since grown into one of the monarchs of the forest, and the time had come when the old and sturdy oak, the mother tree, which has withstood the storms of many centuries, and is passing through an euroclydon now, rejoiced with its vigorous offspring and vied in honoring the memory of him who gave to the world another English-speaking nation.

TROUBLE ON THE ARGOS

Henry Ford is having trouble with his peace party. A minority favor President Wilson's preparedness program, and the majority threaten to land the little band who affirm the President's action at the first stop. Ford, like Christopher Columbus when faced with a munity, is anxiously watching the horizon. It is hoped none of the President's friends will meet the fate of Jonah should a storm arise.

It is the old, old story, the apparent impossibility of maintaining perfect agreement in any group, large or small. As will be seen elsewhere in the Gazette, the Ministerial Association of Baltimore is split over the issue which has brought trouble to the good ship Oscar II. The President's program was affirmed by the bare majority of two.

"Be at peace among yourselves" is a Biblical injunction, yet at the outset of the Christian dispensation we read that the apostles of the Jesus Christ on the night he was about to be delivered up to his tormentors were at strife as to who was destined to be greatest in the kingdom of heaven. Sad chapters are these in the history of our planet.

Henry Ford no doubt means well. He, however, seems to lose sight of the fact that divisions will occur in the best regulated households. This being a fact, how can he expect all to be of one accord in a miscellaneous gathering, composed of some the automobile manufacturer may never have seen until they became members of his so-called party?

EFFIGIES AT AUCTION.

The Eden Musee, on Twenty-third street, New York is now a thing of the past. The wax figures and groups were yesterday sold at public auction. The building is to be torn down and a sky-scraper will be erected on its site. An interesting group, which has been studied by thousands in recent years, represented the surrender of General Lee at Appomattox over half century ago. It brought but $100. It should have been procured for one of the battle abbeys of the south.

Visitors to New York for many years would have regarded their trip to the great methopolis as Hamlet without Hamlet had they failed to visit the Eden Musee. It was one of the most interesting places in the world. The chamber of horrors was a place never to be forgotten. The light in this subterranean abode sent forth a greenish hue, and the figures were calculated to send cold chills down the backs of the nervous. Oliver Cromwell standing over the coffin of Charles the First was a most vivid representation of a sad incident in the history of the English-speaking world. The coffin was shaped as a fiddle case, and the countenance of the Protector was a study to the visitor.

The effigies brought all prices. Some went begging. A representation of his satanic majesty was purchased for the sum of ten dollars.

READING BETWEEN THE LINES.

The speech of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg before the German Reichstag last week has been interpreted in different ways in different capitals. Some look upon it as a defiance and the expression upon the part of Germany of the detemination to die in the last ditch. Others, however, pretend to see bids for peace. The Baltimore Sun in its comments upon the speech says:

The London press and the press generally in this country were at first disposed to see in the recent address of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg to the Reichstag no indication of a willingness to discuss peace overtures on a reasonable basis, but both the English and French papers, after a few days' reflection, read in it a desire to pave the way for a discussion of the subject. The tone of the Chancellor's address was noticeably less irreconcilable than that of earlier utterances, and the mere fact that this addross was devoted to that topic can mean nothing less than that this theme holds a place of the highest importance in the public thought of Germany. The Chancellor repudiates the suggestion that Germany is weakening at any point, or that she can be starved into submission, but there can be no doubt that she is feeing acutely the shortage of food and other necessaries of life, and that a winter such as she has never known in the memory of living men lies before her. This is abundantly proved by the repeated food and anti-war riots in Berlin and other cities, and by the fact that the food problem is admittedly the problem to which the Reichstag will devote its principal attention for some time to come.

It would be a mistake, however, to draw from these conceded facts the conclusion that Germany's position is critical. It is distressing, for the time being, but by no means desperate. The winter season emphasizes the food stringency, because the deficiency in meat and other customary staples is accompanied by a shortage of fuel at some points and of other means of maintaining comfortable conditions.

The objection to such a possibility is what the President aptly designated in his Columbus speech as "a patched up peace". "A patched-up peace" is to be deprecated, of course, if that means that it is to be simply a truce to be followed by another war. The treaty of peace that followed our War of 1812 with Great Britain was a patched-up treaty, in a certain sense, and yet it has been followed by a hundred years in which we have not fired a single shot at each other. A patched up peace has followed many wars; that is to say, both sides have been often willing to compromise on some of the questions over which they fought. There have been some notable exceptions. Rome would not rest until she had destroyed Carthage, and Great Britain could not get the war virus out of her blood until Napoleon was banished.

But is that the only way this war can be ended? Would not "a patched up peace" be better for the world, in general, as well as for Europe, than the conquest and partition of Germany? Is there not a political as well as a moral balance of power which the rest of mankind is interested in preserving?

KILLED MOTHER-IN-LAW

Murderer on Way to Jail Said He Had Made a Good Job of It

Bethlehem, Pa., Dec. 14—Milton Crout, a machinist in the employ of the Bethlehem Foundry and Machine Company, in a cold-blooded manner, it is alleged, slew his mother-in-law, Mrs. Reuben Jacoby, aged 75, at his home in North Bethlehem. The only excuse Crout gave for his act was that the woman "had been interfering with his business." She was shot in the head from behind, the bullet entering the skull near the base.

Crout, in his shirt sleeves, was hustled to the Northampton county jail. On the way down the only remarks he made were an inquiry as to whether he would be hanged or electrocuted and the statement: "I did a good job today."

Four years ago Crout had a bad attack of brain fever, and since then had been drinking more or less, had made threats to kill his family and even the neighbors.

YULETIDE CANDLES

By MARIAN V. DORSEY

EVERY year the little green bayberry candles are sent as luck bringing gifts in an even greater extent than during the past few holiday seasons. The reason for this is that the people who received them the past year or two—and who did not?—thought that they really did seem to bring them good fortune, hence this increasingly rapid growth of the candle's popularity as a substitute for the conventional Christmas card or as constituting in itself an appropriate little gift symbolizing every good wish.

But, while a great many people both send and receive bayberry candles as gifts, there are but few who know whence they come or why the luck superstition is inseparable from them.

The candles, or "dips," as they were first called, are the product of a revived industry started a few years ago in the old Massachusetts towns of Deerfield and Hingham and in the kitchens of the Cape Cod people, all of them using the old pewter or tin molds that have descended in the families from colonial times. Old southern villages have not as yet realized the opportunity offered its women in this revived industry, although the bayberry candles were made by the early settlers in all the coast colonies where the berries grew, never being found inland.

As to the origin of the good luck idea, we seek it in vain among colonial chronicles as applied to the candle itself. Yet from times far earlier the bay tree and the laurel were considered sacred to good fortune, and it is from this immemorial belief that we must trace the present day faith in the virtues of the bayberry candle.

The bay is a species of laurel, and as poets and victors were crowned with the laurel or the bay, wishing them long life and happiness, so is the same wish conveyed in the bestowal of a candle made of the waxen berries borne by the sacred tree.

Bayberry dips are also made as well as the molded candles. These dips are smaller and less even in shape and show us how candles were made by repeatedly dipping the wicks in the melted wax of the bayberries and drying each layer till the dip was of proper size. That was before molds were introduced, early in the eighteenth century.

To accompany a bayberry candle one should send in the little box in which it is daintily wrapped a card on which is printed, in red and green lettering, the legend:

ON CHRISTMAS EVE.
A bayberry candle burnt to the socket
Brings luck to the house,
Food to the larder
And gold to the pocket.

When these cards are not to be found the luck rime may be written on the back of one's visiting card and wrapped with a candle, but in that case it must not be forgotten that the inclosure of writing necessitates extra postage.

Their color, a soft olive green, blends beautifully with other Christmas decorations, and they burn with a steady flame, emitting a delightfully pungent fragrance, and they are consumed evenly all around without making unsightly gutters or ridges of wax down the sides as ordinary candles do.

From New England comes the tradition that if lovers separated by distance each lights a bayberry candle in honor of the other at the same hour the aroma or incense arising from the burning wick will drift in the direction of the absent one; hence the candles make a strong appeal to young people of romantic temperament.

A candle must be presented to you, not bought by yourself, in order to insure good luck, and you must not light your own; that must be done for you by some other person, not necessarily the donor.

Christmas eve is the time for burning, either at dinner or later, and to follow out the old idea of the laurels and the bays to the victor a candle should properly be bestowed on the returned war friend who has recently achieved some success or won a distinction.—Philadelphia Press.

BARON IS INDICTED

German Consulate Attache Charged With Misuse of U. S. Mails

San Francisco, Dec. 14—Indictments charging Baron George Wilhelm von Brincken, attache of the Imperial German consulate, Mrs. Margaret Cornell and Charles C. Crowley, detectives employed by Consul General Franz Bopp, with sending letters through the mail tending to incite arson, murder or assassination, were returned by the Federal grand jury yesterday.

The indictments, which were placed on the secret file, it was authoritatively stated, point to the letters exchanged between Baron von Brincken, Mrs. Cornell, Crowley and Louis J. Smith, the informer. Baron von Brincken, Mrs. Cornell and Crowley will be rearrested tomorrow and placed under heavy bonds.

The indictments contained two counts. One alleged conspiracy to interfere with and destroy commerce between the United States and England, France and Russia. The second count, which Federal officers consider the most serious yet charged against the German agents in this country, deals entirely with the misuse of the United States mails.

NO REASON FOR IT

When Alexandria Citizens Show a Way.

There can be no reason why any reader of this who suffers the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the pains and dangers of kidney ills will fail to heed the words of a neighbor who has found relief. Read what an Alexandria citizen says:

William H. Beach, 417 S. Lee St., Alexandria, says: "My back pained me so badly that I could hardly get about. The kidney secretions passed too frequently and during the night I had to get up every little while. I felt so sore and stiff in the morning that I could hardly get out of bed. I was tired and languid and had no ambition to do anything. I finally got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at W. B. Creighton and Son's Drug Store and the first few doses gave me relief. I used about four boxes and they put my kidneys in good condition. My back never aches now and I feel first-class in every way."

SANTA'S TIRED!

When Jane Fixes the Knickknacks

I LIKE to loaf in the kitchen while Jane in her wifely way
Is puttin' the finish on knickknacks for the dinner on Christmas day.
Say, toilible early o' mornin's, when the coffeepot's simmerin' low,
An' the roosters is crowin' for daybreak—like nobody else didn't know—
An' out through the white curtained winder the stars is beginnin' to fade,
An' the hills that was hid in darkness is at last comin' out o' the shade.
Direc'ly a silence settles, so plain it is mighty nigh seen,
An' me an' the mist stand together, with scurcely a minit between,
Fer I feel unusually tender—in a glad, half sad sort o' way—
While Jane is fixin' the knickknacks for the dinner on Christmas day.

A person don't never, I reckon, disremember the old folks at home,
No matter how feeble he grows an', no matter jest where he may roam,
An' they show pretty clear at each minit, true an' brave as in days gone by,
Till I push my chair in the shadders—a-hidin' the mist in my eye.
I see the grave face of me father as he reads by the candlestick there,
An' I hear some hymn of my mother as she rocks in the hickory chair;
Then the firelight falls on the ceilin' with the rose o' the old time glow
An I dream only dreams o' the future 'stid o' dreams o' the long ago.
Heigh ho! What a world o' changes from the lad to the man now gray,
Watchin' Jane as she fixes knickknacks for the dinner on Christmas day!

Then my thoughts travels on an' onward [illegible] where the old folks be,
An' I wonder if unknown children is thinkin' [illegible] me;
If they hears some one crowsin' [illegible] Miss Annie Home
Christmas morning
[illegible] Holy Christmas gloam,
If [illegible] crew children shoutin' [illegible]
[illegible] there to-day,
[illegible] since today the home-
[illegible] they tried when girls
[illegible]
[illegible] wrote between 'em, but
[illegible]
[illegible] ma'am
[illegible] in the attic broken,
[illegible]
As I watch Jane fixin' knickknacks fer the dinner on Christmas day.

ELECTRIC CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

Still New Enough to Have Novelty Element Dear to Americans.

Electric Christmas gifts still possess that element of novelty dear to the American heart and thus solve the problem of giving Christmas gifts that are "different." Imagine how pleased most men would be to receive an electric shaving cup or electric cigar lighter instead of neckties, socks and handkerchiefs "as usual."

A tea kettle for grandmother, a samovar for mother's 5 o'clock teas, a chafing dish for the college girl, a disk stove for the bachelor, a flatiron or sewing machine motor for the practical housewife—all these novel and useful gifts will be appreciated by the recipients.

It should not be forgotten that these electric Christmas gifts are all useful gifts. Each of these devices is designed to do some one thing better than it can be done any other way, whether it is to percolate coffee, toast bread or furnish the power for running a sewing machine.

The presence of an electric percolator on any table adds a touch of something different and something better. The electric tea samovar is rapidly becoming quite the thing for the modern tea table.

"Wassail! Drinkasil!"

The wassail bowl, which is still used in some old European families at Christmas, succeeded the skull of the Norseman's foe as a drinking vessel. In these old wassail bowls, some specimens of which are of brown ware and others of massive silver, were placed the ale, the ginger, the sugar, the nutmeg and the roasted crab apples. Where the old custom still prevails the ale is served spiced and sweetened in the wassail bowl, but the apples are omitted.
